On October 13, 2012 Bill Long was asked to speak at the New York State Bus Contractors Association Annual Convention held in Saratoga Springs, New York. Mr. Long presented the topic "Risk Management: Accidents Happen. Then What?" The program focused on the many "hats" worn by the school bus contractor in New York State and discussed the nature and scope of the liability a bus company is exposed to in the transportation of school children from their homes to school and safely back again. Discussed was the bus contractor's potential legal liability in the varied roles their business requires them to effectively play as landlord, bus driver, investigator, parent and teacher. Mr. Long offered to the many company owners and safety managers in attendance a series of policies and procedures which might be given consideration and incorporated into a particular company's safety or litigation program
